

CERTIFIED MECHANICAL

With an eye toward learning about the newest technologies and state-of-the-art HVAC equipment, Certified Mechanical knows that being on the cutting edge means field-testing and selling only proven products.

That's why they're a proud dealer for Trane air conditioning systems. "Value engineering is what sets us apart," says owner Ron Edenfield.

In business since 1979, Certified Mechanical specializes in the installation of economical, efficient heating and air conditioning systems for luxury custom homes. "But we're equipped to handle any new or existing residential or small commercial project," says Edenfield. "A large percentage of our work originates from the members of the Master Custom Builder Council."

The company is focused on one important goal: "We believe in providing customers with the best product to meet their needs, while maintaining an excellent cost value," Edenfield says.

Certified Mechanical, in partnership with Trane of Orlando, takes great effort to ensure its staff is trained in each of the products they represent and is prepared to knowledgeably answer questions about the products and available service. Trained specialists will review system needs in order to provide the best product solution for the client. "We offer and provide a quality product. I require and the staff is trained to place themselves in the customer's position and see if he or she would be a happy customer."

Edenfield is an avid NASCAR fan and vacations frequently. He enjoys touring with his wife on his Goldwing motorcycle. "I'm passionate about my family and my grandbabies," says Edenfield. And, that passion translates into his top-quality work for his clients as well.
